Short paper on GUI and Command Lines

The GUI for GitHub doesn't feel the easiest to understand right off the bat. I'll need to play around in it to get use to how to move things around and such. I'll need to learn the basics of command lines as well and I'm excited to do so! I learn best via step-by-step tutorials and seeing exactly where and what to click so I'm glad Michael integrates that into his teachings.

I'd say withing GitHub the most trouble I'm having is just knowing where to click to get what action. Say if I want to delete a repository there isn't a simple delete button on the front page is all. What I'm implying by this is I'll just have to play around with the interface until I understand how to pilot it effectively. Similarly I'm sure I'm just not the most familiar with command lines so I need to pick up some tricks and the understanding on how to operate them.
